REPORT CARD

for 2007

A REPORT CARD TO OUR CITIZENS

We are proud to present our fourth “Juvenile Justice Report Card” as part of our continuing tradition of accountability.

I am excited as I reflect not only on our continued successes that you will see in this report card, but also on the many physical improvements taking place and the implementation of new programs at DJJ. We are undergoing major construction projects to replace dilapidated dormitories and to construct a new visitation center for parents visiting their children “behind the fence,” and other usage. Our new dormitories, along with our new Girls Transition Home, are among the major additions to the Broad River Road Complex and will be replacing buildings that were constructed over 40 years ago with new, more secure housing for juveniles.

Part of our new construction is notable for another reason. Our new “Community Connections Center,” has the distinction of being entirely privately funded. The “Friends of Juvenile Justice” foundation is raising almost $3 million through their Community Connections Campaign and will build this facility and donate it to the agency, solely funded by generous private contributors. To my knowledge, this is the first time that a private foundation has made such a generous contribution to a state penal institution.

In this Report Card, you will read about continued improvements in the areas of victim services and education, which are sources of great pride for DJJ. You will also see that there continue to be areas for improvement in our juvenile justice system. Our state’s high juvenile detention rate is still a major problem. Our average daily population count places us at 69 percent over designed capacity. Continued overcrowding in the DJJ Detention Center highlights a desperate need for more prevention programs in the community. And, although we have implemented several community prevention and employability programs, more needs to be done to better protect our citizens.

We hope you will take time to study this Report Card and gain a better understanding of how the juvenile justice system works and performs in the state. Please join in our efforts to help make communities safer, to better satisfy victims of crime, and to better prepare juvenile offenders for productive, law-abiding lives in their communities.

Bill Byars

Director, South Carolina

Department of Juvenile Justice

Juveniles usually enter the juvenile justice system in South Carolina when they are taken into custody by law enforcement or when a Solicitor or a school refers them to DJJ. At this stage, personnel at a DJJ county office usually interview the juvenile. DJJ has offices in 43 of South Carolina's 46 counties. Law enforcement also may elect to send the juvenile to a South Carolina juvenile detention center, pending a hearing.

After county office or detention center personnel have interviewed a juvenile, DJJ makes recommendations to the Solicitor's office regarding the case. The Solicitor has a number of options available when deciding how to pursue a case. A Solicitor may choose to divert a juvenile to a community program (such as a drug court or juvenile arbitration program) or require the juvenile to make restitution for the offense. Solicitors also may choose to proceed with prosecution or to dismiss a case entirely.

If the Solicitor chooses to prosecute, the next stage of the process involves the family court. A family court judge determines the guilt or innocence of the juvenile and sentences those juveniles adjudicated delinquent (found guilty). Often a judge will request a DJJ evaluation of the juvenile before making a final ruling, or prior to commitment. This involves psychological, social, and educational evaluations conducted either in the community or at one of DJJ's three regional evaluation centers. The resulting comprehensive evaluation helps the judge decide how to proceed in the best interests of the juvenile, victim, and community.

A family court judge may find the juvenile is not delinquent (not guilty). After a finding of delinquency, the judge has several sentencing options. Chief among these is probation, which maintains the juvenile in the community under DJJ supervision. The judge may also commit the juvenile to DJJ custody by imposing a determinate (fixed amount of time) or indeterminate sentence. An indeterminate sentence allows the youth to be confined up to the age of 21.

Upon indeterminate commitment, a juvenile will be given a time range or "guideline," determined by the state Board of Juvenile Parole (for all felonies and select misdemeanors) or DJJ's own release authority (for most misdemeanors and all status offenses). This range is based on the severity of the juvenile's offense and his history of previous offenses. These guidelines can run anywhere from 1-3 months up to 36-54 months. The Board and DJJ use these guidelines – along with an evaluation of the juvenile's behavior and progress – to determine the length of incarceration.

Juveniles may remain incarcerated beyond their guideline (up to their 21st birthday). They may also be paroled prior to their minimum guideline for exceptional behavior and progress.

Juveniles may be granted conditional or unconditional releases. A conditional release might involve requiring the juvenile to complete a local aftercare program or program at a wilderness camp or group home. A conditional release also involves a period of parole supervision. DJJ county officers supervise juveniles on parole, much as they supervise juveniles on probation.

Referred to DJJ

2006 – 2007	24,699
2005 – 2006	25,820
2004 – 2005	26,213
2003 – 2004	27,328
2002 – 2003	29,031

CASES REFERRALS TO DJJ: In FY 2006-07, 24,699 cases were referred to DJJ. Data collected by DJJ and Juvenile Arbitration Programs (early intervention) at the time offenders exited the juvenile justice system revealed that 67 percent of the population was male, 58 percent was African-American, and the average age was 15.4 years.

FIVE MOST FREQUENT OFFENSES

ASSOCIATED WITH REFERRALS TO DJJ: The #1 charge associated with cases referred to DJJ statewide was disturbing schools. The number of disturbing schools cases has nearly tripled over the past ten years. No felony offenses occurred in the top five reasons for referral to DJJ and truancy returned to the list for the first time since 2004.

Five Most Frequent Offenses Associated with Referrals to DJJ

- #1 Disturbing Schools
- #2 Simple Assault & Battery
- #3 Public Disorderly Conduct
- #4 Shoplifting
- #5 Truancy

OFFENDERS DIVERTED BY JUVENILE

ARBITRATION PROGRAMS: Juvenile Arbitration is a program operated in all 16 judicial circuits in South Carolina to divert juvenile offenders from the court. In the program, trained citizen volunteers work with offenders/parents, victims, and law enforcement to determine appropriate sanctions. Referrals to the program have increased by 17 percent over the past five years.

MEASURING SYSTEM ACCOUNTABILITY:

The justice system has a responsibility to serve crime victims. Over the past 4 years, crime victims across South Carolina were surveyed to determine their level of satisfaction with the juvenile justice system. Victims were asked to rate their overall experience with the juvenile justice system. On a rating scale with 1 being most negative to 5 being most positive, 82 percent of victims surveyed rated their satisfaction at either a four or a five.

TRENDS IN JUVENILE JUSTICE: One indicator of trends in South Carolina's juvenile justice system is the number of offenders committed into the custody of DJJ. Table A compares the number of offenders sentenced to DJJ custody over the past five years. At the close of FY 2006-07, there had been no escapes from hardware-secure long term institutions in 1,372 days.

Another indicator of trends is the number of juveniles being held in DJJ's Detention Center pending court action. Juveniles detained by the family court and law enforcement agencies and determined to be high-risk offenders are held in detention centers. DJJ's Detention Center, which has a designed capacity of 72 beds, had an average daily population of 122 juveniles during FY 2006-07 (69 percent over designed capacity).

INTENSIVE SUPERVISION INITIATIVE (ISI):

ISI is a new initiative designed to promote community safety and ensure successful reentry of paroled offenders back into the community. Intensive Supervision Officers (ISO's) supervise no more than 20 youth at a time. The program has expanded from 30 to 51 ISO's during FY 2007-08.

LAW-ABIDING BEHAVIOR: Recidivism is the rate at which juveniles are charged with a new offense. Of the 8,116 cases closed during FY 2006-07, 86 percent of offenders on probation or parole, or in Juvenile Arbitration Programs did not re-offend while under supervision.

New 2007 Restorative Initiatives Building Partnerships, Ensuring Public Safety, Providing Customer Services

Building Community Partnerships

- Columbia College – DJJ partnered with The Leadership Institute of Columbia College to incorporate the LEAD program, “The Seven Habits of Highly Effective Teens,” for the female students at DJJ.
- Rotary International – DJJ joined with the Rotary Club of Lake Murray-Irmo to charter the first Rotary Interact Club in the world to be located in a correctional setting.
- SC Vocational Rehabilitation Department (SCVRD) – DJJ and SCVRD signed an agreement to promote the delivery of vocational services to eligible youth supervised by DJJ.
- Women’s Missionary Union (WMU) – DJJ signed an agreement with the WMU to expand and develop delinquency prevention programs, reentry services and in-kind donations of personal items for juveniles.
- Children’s Law Center (CLC) at the University of SC – DJJ partnered with CLC to pilot two projects aimed at detention reform through collaborative efforts with law enforcement.
- Clemson University – DJJ partnered with Clemson University to create the Center for Girls Advocacy and to develop a day treatment program for youth in the community.
- The 100 Black Men – DJJ partnered with The 100 Black Men to implement the Lunch Connection, a DJJ Youth Leadership Platform.
- AME Church – Since entering into a formal partnership with the African Methodist Episcopal (AME) Church in 2006, DJJ has benefited through the recruitment of volunteers, expansion of Teen After School Center sites, and fundraising that resulted in $100,000 in pledges to the Friends of Juvenile Justice.

Ensuring Public Safety

- Auxiliary Probation Services (APS) – DJJ expanded APS to reduce recidivism and provide positive one-on-one adult contact for offenders. APS utilizes community volunteers who work with non-violent and low-risk probationers within the juvenile justice system.

- Release Authority – DJJ established an internal Release Authority, allowing the agency to make release decisions on most incarcerated offenders with indeterminate commitments to DJJ for misdemeanors and probation violations.
- Jail Removal Initiative (JRI) – DJJ developed JRI Therapeutic Foster Care to offer a safe alternative to detention for minor offenders.
- Gang Intervention Initiative – DJJ piloted intervention services for juveniles involved with gangs in four large counties.
- Outward Bound – DJJ implemented the use of this rugged outdoor program as a staff-secure alternative placement, alternative to DJJ commitment, or release option for juveniles.

Providing Customer Services

- 2007 Chinn Planning Report – DJJ asked expert consultant, Chinn Planning, to provide an independent review of the agency's progress regarding conditions of confinement, staffing levels, staff development, housing, and programming. This report concluded that DJJ, "has developed programs, services and facilities that reflect best practices in the field of juvenile justice."
- Girls Transition Home – DJJ opened a home utilized to transition and prepare incarcerated girls for their return to the community.
- Videoconferencing – DJJ introduced videoconferencing as a tool to improve customer services for juveniles, families, community agencies, and crime victims, as well as to better communication within the agency.
- Bridge Aftercare Program – DJJ expanded the Bridge Aftercare Program for offenders who received substance abuse treatment during their commitment to DJJ.
- Sewing & Alterations Job Skills Program – DJJ implemented this vocational program designed to introduce juveniles to new job skills and employment opportunities in the alteration and upholstery industries.
- Earning Your Way Back – DJJ established this restitution program to enable offenders to earn the money needed to make financial restitution to their victims by performing community service work. The program is made possible through a partnership with the Lake Murray-Irmo Rotary Club.
